Webinar: Intro to Development Planning and Budgeting (06/15/23)

The fourth and final session of GCN's fundraising series, this course shows participants how to implement a reliable resource development planning process in your own organization. Leading a successful development effort requires a variety of skills and competencies. The biggest challenge, no matter what the size of the organization, is to match the chosen method (or methods) of fundraising with the mission, the characteristics of potential supporters, and the resources available to do the necessary work.

Webinar: Employee Performance Challenges (06/29/23)

In the fifth and final course of GCN's management series, participants will learn how to develop solutions for dealing with problem employees and employee conflict. Handling performance issues is one of the most common and challenging tasks a manager can face. Investigating employee complaints must be done with an open mind and plenty of forethought, because not dealing with employee issues can lead to bigger problems down the road. Similarly, conflicts between employees can create workforce stress that impacts performance and teamwork. Because it is critical to address these issues quickly, efficiently, and fairly, managers must have skills at the ready for investigating and resolving them.
